

DAW SUU (... the Lady, so at her country, is called Aung San Suu Kyi) was arrested with all the deputies and militants of her party, the National League for Democracy. The soldiers waited for the dawn of the opening ceremony of the new Parliament in the capital Naypyidaw to take the Lady - Nobel Peace Prize in 1991 and Foreign Minister of Myanmar - whose strategy ("ahimsa"), inspired by the doctrine of non violence of Mahatma Gandhi, was mocked by the generals who, with this coup, have openly shown to the whole world the fragility of the dream pursued by Aung San Suu Kyi to reach reconciliation with her persecutors. The military has once again thrown off the mask of "false democracy" with which for years they have deceived millions of Burmans and the entire international community. In this period, marked by the "recession of democracies", this violent frontal attack by the military to the transition to a state subject to the rule of law has absolutely to be condemned by all possible means. In the motivation for the Nobel Peace Prize which was awarded to the Lady, it was written: "an example of the power of those who have no power". ... for a free and democratic Burma.
